VOL. I. NO. 11.

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

OUR PATRONS.

IN presenting our first number to our Patrons, we call all the diffidence of persons entering upon a new and untried line of business. But a moment's reflection upon the noble objects which we have in view by the publication of this Journal; the expediency of its appearance at this time, when so many schemes of action concerning our people encourage us to come boldly before an enlightened public. For we believe, that a paper devoted to the dissemination of useful knowledge among our brethren, and to their moral and religious improvement, must meet with the cordial approbation of every friend to humanity.

The peculiarities of this Journal, render it important that we should advertise to the world the motives by which we are actuated, and the objects which we contemplate.

We wish to plead our own cause. Too long have others spoken for us. Too long has the public been deceived by misrepresentations, in things which concern us dearly, though in the estimation of some mere trifles; for though there are many in society who exercise towards us benevolent feelings; still (with sorrow we confess it) there are others who make it their business to enlarge upon the least trifle, which tends to the discredit of any person of colour; and pronounce anathemas and denounce our whole body for the misconduct of this guilty one.

We are aware that there are many instances of vice among us; but we know that it is because no one has taught its subjects to be virtuous; many instances of poverty, because no sufficient efforts accommodated to minds contracted by slavery; and deprived of early education have been made, to teach them how to husband their hard earnings, and to secure to themselves comforts.

Education being an object of the highest importance to the welfare of society, we shall endeavour to present just and adequate views of it, and to urge upon our brethren the necessity and expediency of training their children, while young, to habits of industry, and thus forming them for becoming useful members of society. It is surely time that we should awake from this lethargy of years, and make a concentrated effort for the education of our youth. We form a spoke in the human wheel, and it is necessary that we should understand our dependence on the different parts, and theirs on us, in order to perform our part with propriety.

Though not desirous of dictating, we shall feel it our incumbent duty to dwell occasionally upon the general principles and rules of economy. The world has grown too enlightened, to estimate any man's character by his personal appearance. Though all men acknowledge the excellency of Franklin's maxims, yet comparatively few practise upon them. We may deplore when it is too late, the neglect of these self-evident truths, but it avails little to mourn. Ours will be the task of admonishing our brethren on these points.

The civil rights of a people being of the greatest value, it shall ever be our duty to vindicate our brethren, when oppressed, and to lay the case before the public. We shall also urge upon our brethren, (who are qualified by the laws of the different states) the expediency of using their elective franchise; and of making an independent use of the same. We wish them not to become the tools of party.

And as much time is frequently lost, and wrong principles instilled, by the perusal of works of trivial importance, we shall consider it a part of our duty to recommend to our young readers, such authors as will not only enlarge their stock of useful knowledge, but such as will also serve to stimulate them to higher attainments in science.

We trust also, that through the columns of the FREEDOM'S JOURNAL, many practical pieces, having for their basis, the improvement of our brethren, will be presented to them; from the pens of many of our respected friends, who have kindly promised their assistance.

It is our earnest wish to make our Journal a medium of intercourse between our brethren in the different states of this great confederacy; that through its columns an expression of our sentiments, on many interesting subjects which concern us, may be offered to the public; that plans which apparently are beneficial may be candidly discussed and properly weighed; if worthy, receive our cordial approbation; if not, our marked disapprobation.

Useful knowledge of every kind, and every thing that relates to Africa, shall find a ready admission into our columns; and as that vast continent becomes daily more known, we trust that many things will come to light, proving that the natives of it are neither so ignorant nor stupid as they have generally been supposed to be.

And while these important subjects shall occupy the columns of the FREEDOM'S JOURNAL, we would not be unmindful of our brethren who are still in the iron fetters of bondage. They are our kindred by all the ties of nature; and though but little can be effected by us, still let our sympathies be poured forth, and our prayers in their behalf, ascend to Him who is able to succour them.

From the press and the pulpit we have suffered much by being incorrectly represented. Men, whom we equally love and admire have not hesitated to represent us disadvantageously, without becoming personally acquainted with the true state of things, nor discerning between virtue and vice among us. The virtuous part of our people feel themselves sorely aggrieved under the existing state of things—they are not appreciated.

Our vices and our degradation are ever arrayed against us, but our virtues are passed by unnoticed. And what is still more lamentable, our friends, to whom we concede all the principles of humanity and religion, from these very causes seem to have fallen into the current of popular feeling and are imperceptibly floating on the stream—actually living in the practice of prejudice, while they abjure it in theory, and feel it not in their hearts. Is it not very desirable that such should know more of our actual condition, and of our efforts and feelings, that in forming or advocating plans for our amelioration, they may do it more understandingly? In the spirit of candor and humility we intend by a simple representation of facts to lay our case before the public, with a view to arrest the progress of prejudice, and to shield ourselves against the consequent evils. We wish to conciliate all and to irritate none, yet we must be firm and unwavering in our principles, and persevering in our efforts.

If ignorance, poverty and degradation have hitherto been our unhappy lot; has the Eternal decree gone forth, that our race alone are to remain in this state, while knowledge and civilization are shedding their enlightening rays over the rest of the human family? The recent travels of Donham and Clapperton in the interior of Africa, and the interesting narrative which they have published; the establishment of the republic of Hayti after years of sanguinary warfare; its subsequent progress in all the arts of civilization; and the advancement of liberal ideas in South America, where despotism has given place to free governments, and where many of our brethren now fill important civil and military stations, prove the contrary.

The interesting fact, that there are FIVE HUNDRED THOUSAND free persons of colour, one half of whom might perse, and the whole be benefited by the publication of the Journal; that no publication, as yet, has been devoted exclusively to their improvement—that many selections from approved standard authors, which are within the reach of few, may occasionally be made—and more important still, that this large body of our citizens have no public channel—all serve to prove the real necessity, at present, for the appearance of the FREEDOM'S JOURNAL.

It shall ever be our desire so to conduct the editorial department of our paper as to give offence to none of our patrons; as nothing is farther from us than to make it the advocate of any partial views, either in politics or religion. What few days we can number, have been devoted to the improvement of our brethren; and it is our earnest wish that the remainder may be spent in the same delightful service.

In conclusion, whatever concerns us as a people, will ever find a ready admission into the FREEDOM'S JOURNAL, interwoven with all the principal news of the day.

And while every thing in our power shall be performed to support the character of our Journal, we would respectfully invite our numerous friends to assist by their communications; and our coloured brethren to strengthen our hands by their subscriptions, as our labour is one of common cause, and worthy of their consideration and support. And we do most earnestly solicit the latter, that if at any time we should seem to be zealous, or too pointed in the inculcation of any important lesson, they will remember, that they are equally interested in the cause in which we are engaged, and attribute our zeal to the peculiarities of our situation, and our earnest engagedness in their well-being.

MEMOIRS OF CAPT. PAUL CUFFEE.

"On the first of the present month of August, 1811, a vessel arrived at Liverpool, with a cargo from Sierra Leone; the owner, master, mate, and whole crew of which are free blacks. The master, who is also owner, is the son of an American slave, and is said to be very well skilled both in trade and navigation, as well as to be of a very pious and moral character. It must have been a strange and an animating spectacle to see this free and enlightened African, entering as an independent trader, with his black crew into that port, which was so lately the nidus of the slave trade.—Edinburgh Review for August, 1811.

We are happy in having an opportunity of confirming the above account, and at the same time of laying before our readers an authentic memoir of Capt. Paul Cuffee, the master and owner of the vessel above alluded to; who sailed from this port on the 20th ult. with a licence from the British Government, to prosecute his intended voyage to Sierra Leone.—The father of Paul Cuffee was a native of Africa,—whence he was brought, as a slave into Massachusetts. He was there purchased by a person named Slocum, and remained in slavery a very considerable portion of his life. He was named Cuffee, but, as it is usual in those parts, took the name of Slocum, as expressing to whom he belonged. Like many of his countrymen he possessed a mind superior to his condition; although he was diligent in the business of his master, and faithful to his interest, yet by great industry and economy he was enabled to purchase his personal liberty. At the time that remains of several Indian tribes, who originally possessed the rights of soil, resided in Massachusetts, Cuffee became acquainted with a woman descended from one of those tribes, named Ruth Moses, and married her. He continued in habits of industry and frugality, and soon afterwards purchased a farm of 100 acres at the point in Massachusetts.

Cuffee and Ruth had a family of ten children. The three oldest sons, David, John, and John; are farmers in the neighbourhood of West Point; filling respectable situations in society, and endowed with good intellectual capacities. They are all married, and have families to whom they are giving good education. Of six daughters four are respectably married, while two remain single. Paul was born on the Island of Cuttashamker, one of the Elizabeth Islands, near New Bedford, in the year 1750—when he was about fourteen years of age, his father died, leaving a considerable property in land, but which being at that time unproductive, afforded but little provision for his numerous family, and thus the care of supporting his mother and sisters devolved upon his brothers and himself. At this time Paul conceived that commerce furnished to industry more ample rewards than agriculture; and he was conscious that he possessed qualities which, under proper culture, would enable him to pursue commercial employments with prospects of success—he therefore entered at the age of sixteen, as a common hand, on board of a vessel destined to the bay of Mexico, on a whaling voyage. His second voyage was to the West Indies, but on his third he was captured by a British ship, during the American war, about the year 1776, and underwent a detention as a prisoner, at New York, until he was permitted to return home to Westport, where owing to the unfortunate continuance of hostilities he spent about two years in his agricultural pursuits. During this interval Paul and his brother John Cuffee, were called on by the collector of the district, in which they resided, for the payment of a personal tax. It appeared to them, that by the laws and constitution of Massachusetts, taxation and the whole rights of citizenship were united. If the laws demanded of them the payment of the personal taxes, the same laws must necessarily and constitutionally invest them with the right of representing and being represented in the state legislature. But they had never been considered as entitled to the privilege of voting at elections, nor of being elected to places of trust and honor. Under these circumstances they refused payment of the demands. The collector resorted to the force of the laws, and after many delays and detentions, Paul and his brother desired more prudent to silence them by paying the demands; but they resolved, if it were possible to obtain the rights which they believed to be connected with taxation. They presented a respectful petition to the state legislature. From some individuals it met with a warm and almost indignant opposition. A considerable majority was, however, favorable to their object. They perceived the wisdom and justice of the petition, and with admirable magnanimity, in defiance of the violence of the times, they passed a law releasing all free persons of color, liable to taxation, according to the established rules for freemen, and granting them all the privileges belonging to the other citizens. This was an equally honorable triumph to the petitioners, and the legislature—a day which ought to be forever fully remembered by every person of color within the boundaries of Massachusetts, and the names of John and Paul Cuffee should always be united with its recollection.

Common Schools in New York. It appears from the report of the Superintendent of Common Schools in this state, that he presented last year to the Education Committee, that of the 721,000 children in the State, 721 have been admitted to the law. That in the school districts, the number of colored children who have been received, is 1,000.

POETRY

THE AFRICAN CHIEF.

BY HAYAST.

Chained in the market place he stood, A man of giant frame, Amid the glistening multitude, That shrunk to hear his name—

All stern of look and strong of limb, His dark eyes on the ground— And silently he laid on him, As on a lion's head.

Vainly, but with what chief had fought, He was a captive now; Yet pride, that to some humbles not, Was written on his brow.

The scars his dark broad bosom wore, Showed warrior true and brave; A Prince among his tribe before, He could not be a slave.

Then to his conquerors he spoke— "My brother is a King; Undo this shackles from my neck, And take this bracelet ring;

And send me where my brother roams, And I will fill thy hands With store of ivory from the plains, And gold dust from the sands."

"Not for thy ivory nor thy gold Will I unbind thy chain, That bloody hand shall never hold The battle spear again.

A price thy nation never gave Shall yet be paid for thee; For thou shalt be the Christian's slave, In lands beyond the sea."

Then went the warrior chief, and bade To shroud his locks away, And, one by one, each heavy braid Before the victor lay.

Thick were the platted locks, and long, And deftly hidden there Shone many a wedge of gold among The dark and crisped hair.

"Look, feast thy greedy eye with gold, Long kept for soot and need; Take it—thou earnest sums unfold— And say that I am freed.

Take it—my wife, the long, long day Weeps by the cocoa tree, And my young children leave their play, And ask in vain for me."

"I take thy gold—but I have made Thy fetters fast and strong, And woe that by the cocoa shade Thy wife will wail thee long."

Strong was the agony that shook The captive's frame to hear, And the proud meaning of his look, Was changed to mortal fear.

His heart was broken—crazed his brain— At once his eye grew wild, He struggled wildly with his chain, Whisped, and wept, and smiled.

Yet, worn not long those fatal bands, And once at that day, They drove him forth upon the sands, The foul hyena's prey.

EFFECTS OF SLAVERY.

From the N. Y. Christian Advocate.

Mr. Editor.—A few days since the following fact which occurred six or eight weeks ago, on a circuit, was related to me. It took hold of my feelings in a very peculiar manner, and excited within my bosom a greater detestation of slave dealing as well as of those who engage in this nefarious practice, than I ever realized before. I feel in my own mind that such individuals are unworthy of a place in society, and should be treated by every philanthropist with cold neglect. The ears of God are open to the cries of the hundreds whom they have torn from the society of those who rendered life agreeable to them. How great and tremendous then will that account be which shall be summed up against them in the day of eternity.

"OMEGA."

A few weeks since, there was a sale of the effects of the late Dr. McANS. Among other things were several slaves. One of them, a man named William, was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church at this place. As far as I can ascertain, he was a very pious, humble Christian, and useful among the people of his own color, by holding meetings and occasionally exhorting them. Among those present at this sale was a Mr. W. from a neighboring city, a man who I am told, does nothing for a livelihood but go about to purchase negroes, and employ others to do so. To this detestable person was poor William knocked off, for about $265. When the man was going to quit the place, he ordered William to stretch out his hands in order to be tied. He rather shrunk from this, as every honest man would do: however with much piety and resignation, he submitted.— Then it was that his colored friends began to weep bitterly: William turned his attention to them, and with a becoming dignity and Christian fortitude, which melted the hearts of all present, but the hard and scoured one of his purchaser, said "Don't cry for me; God is every where." This so affected those around, that a Mr. S. offered Mr. W. $400 for the man. But he refused it, and poor William was driven off. Where he now is I know not; but I think it more than probable, that he is far, very far from his native place, as I am informed that the same man, a short time after, put four or seven wagon loads of slaves on board a vessel which has already sailed from B. Poor William! my heart feels for you more particularly, when I think that you may fall into the hands of some hard, tyrannical master; but fear not, your "God is every where;" and you shall feel the truth of that promise given to the disciples of Jesus, "Lo I am with you always, even to the end of the world."

VARIETIES.

Advantage of Choosing a Wife by Proxy.—Among other observations, we took occasion to inquire, whether the practice of the elders and addresses (of the sect of the Muravians) in selecting a partner for a young man who wished to marry, was not sometimes attended with serious inconveniences. But they seemed to have no doubt, that this regulation produced more happy marriages, than would be effected by leaving the parties to choose for themselves. A lively and sensible person, with whose conversation we were particularly pleased, took occasion to give us his own experience on the subject. He expressed himself to the following effect: "When I wished to change my situation in life, I applied to one of our elders, and communicated the matter to him. He asked me whether I had any particular young woman in view; I replied in the negative, and that I wished my superiors to choose for me. Pleased with my answer, and the confidence reposed in them, he assured me that the greatest care should be taken to select for me a partner, who would be, in every respect, proper for me. The elders and addresses consulted together; and, after a suitable time, fixed on a young woman, whose disposition and qualifications were correspondent to my own, and which they thought were adapted to make me happy. We were introduced to each other in the presence of our superiors. The interview was favorable: we became mutually attached; and in a short time we were married. The event has perfectly answered our most sanguine hopes. I probably should not have chosen so happily, if left to decide for myself; but I am certain I could not have made a better choice." He concluded his observations with a degree of animation and satisfaction, which precluded all doubt of the truth of his assertions.—Memoirs of Lindley Murray.

The Egg Trade.—Few people have any idea of the extent to which the trade in Eggs is carried on, as an article of export and import. A friend of ours, recently conversed with an Irish gentleman in this town, who had come here for the purpose of selling some of that "surplus produce" of grain which, according to one of our statesmen, is the cause of Irish starvation, and who is also engaged in the egg trade. He stated to our friend that he generally ships from ten to fifteen crates per week of this "merchandise" from Dublin to Liverpool, each crate containing 7000 eggs. The trade in this article has greatly increased, it seems, within the last two or three years; and in the last year there have been sent from Dublin to England not less than 100 crates, or 700,000 eggs per week! Liverpool and Manchester, particularly the latter, are great consumers of the article.—The general price in Dublin is five shillings per hundred, but the hundred, it must be remembered, is calculated according to a sort of Irish arithmetic, and in plain English amounts to 124; the odds being probably a sort of allowance for breakage and chance of over-keeping. It thus appears that $4000 per week, or something better than 700000 per annum, is expended in Dublin in eggs for exportation alone! It would not be a very easy matter to calculate the number of eggs consumed in Dublin itself, seeing that good Catholics look upon egg-eating as sinful, and taking into consideration the number of Catholics, and the quantum of fast days which their church enjoins. The eggs are collected from the country all round Dublin; but are principally brought from the province of Connaught, where, probably the housewives are more expert in the rearing of fowls than in any other part. There is also a considerable trade in this article from Belfast. The eggs are packed in straw, which is laid a foot thick at the bottom of the crate; upon this is placed a layer of eggs, then a layer of straw, and so on until the crate is filled. But these eggs are not all consumed in Manchester and Liverpool; the latter supplies Birmingham, and the former sends to the "hard-fisted artisans of Sheffield" a portion of Connaught's "surplus produce."—Kendal Chronicle.

Chinese Fashions.—It is well known, that in China a ridiculous custom prevails, of rendering the feet of their females so small, that they can with difficulty support their bodies. This is deemed a principal part of their beauty; and no swathing or compression is omitted, when they are young, to give them this fancied accomplishment. Every woman of fashion, and every woman who wishes to be reckoned handsome, must have her feet so small, that they could easily enter the shoe of a child of six years of age. The great toe is the only one left to act with freedom; the rest are doubled down under the foot, in their tenderest infancy, and restrained by tight bandages, till they unite with and are buried in the sole. I have inspected a model of a Chinese lady's foot, exactly of this description, which I was assured was taken from life. The length was only two inches and three-fourths; the breadth of the base of the heel seven-eighths of an inch; the breadth of the broadest part of the foot, one and one-fourth of an inch; and the diameter of the ankle, three inches above the heel, one and seven-eighths of an inch. Gentil assures us, that the women, in the northern parts of China, employ every art to diminish their eyes. For this purpose, the girls, instructed by their mothers, extend their eye-lids continually, with the view of making their eyes oblong and small. These properties, in the estimation of the Chinese, when joined to a flat nose, and large, open, pendulous ears, constitute the perfection of beauty.—Dicks. Phil of Religion.

A widow, of the name of Rugg, having taken Sir Charles Price for her second husband, and being asked by a friend how she liked the charge, replied, "O, I have sold my old Rugg for a good Price."

DIED.—In this city, on Friday the 21 inst. Mr Peter Lawrence, aged 38 years. On Saturday the 31 inst. Mr John B. Mitchell, aged 27 years. On the third inst. Mrs. Betsey Madison, aged about 40 years.

E. F. HUGHES' SCHOOL.

For Coloured Children of both Sexes. Under St. Philip's Church, is now ready for the admission of Pupils. IN this school will be taught READING, WRITING, ARITHMETIC, ENGLISH, GRAMMAR, GEOGRAPHY, with the use of Maps and Globes, and HISTORY. Terms from two to four dollars per quarter. Reference.—Rev. Peter Williams, Rev. James Varick, Rev. S. E. Cornish, Rev. Benjamin Paul, Rev. William Miller. New-York, March 14.

As education is what renders civilized man superior to the savage: as the dissemination of knowledge is continually progressing among all other classes in the community: we deem it expedient to establish a paper, and bring into operation all the means with which our benevolent Creator has endowed us, for the moral, religious, civil and literary improvement of our injured race. Experience teaches us that the Press is the most economical and convenient method by which this object is to be obtained. Daily slandered, we think that there ought to be some channel of communication between us and the public: through which a single voice may be heard, in defence of the thousands of free people of colour. For ever has injustice been heaped upon us, when our only defence was an appeal to the ALMIGHTY; but we believe that the time has now arrived, when the clamours of our enemies should be refuted by forcible arguments. Believing that all men are equal by nature, we indulge the pleasing anticipation, that as the means of knowledge are more extensively diffused among our people, their condition will become improved, not only in their daily walk and conversation, but in their domestic economy. Our columns shall ever be open to a temperate discussion of interesting subjects. But in respect to matters of religion, while we concede to them their full importance, and shall occasionally introduce articles of this general character, we would not be the advocates of any particular sect or party. In the discussion of political subjects, we shall ever regard the constitution of the United States as our polar star. Pledged to no party, we shall endeavour to urge our brethren to use their right to the elective franchise as free citizens. It shall never be our object to court controversy, though we must at all times consider ourselves as champions in defence of oppressed humanity. As the diffusion of knowledge, and raising our community into respectability, are the principal motives which influence us in our present undertaking, we hope our hands will be upheld by all our brethren and friends.

SAMUEL E. CORNISH, JOHN B. RUSSWURM, Editors and Proprietors.

Recommendations. The following Testimonials in favour of the gentlemen who propose a paper in this city, more especially adapted to the wants and circumstances of coloured people, have been handed to us for publication: we insert them the more readily, because we believe them to be justly merited.—New-York Observer. From the Rev. SAMUEL H. COX, Pastor of the Light-street Church, New York. Being well acquainted with the Rev. Samuel E. Cornish, and having good evidence of the character of his colleague, John B. Russwurm, A. B.; and they having become co-editors of a weekly paper, designed chiefly for the reading of their coloured brethren; I am free to express my confidence in the promise of their enterprise, and in the relative competency with which its concerns will be conducted. New-York, Jan. 17, 1827. I am acquainted with the Editors, and consider them very competent to the undertaking of the proposed work: they are well known in this city as respected and valuable citizens. THOMAS EDDY. New-York, 1st mo. 17, 1827.
