DR. PARKHURST'S
ARTICLE
ON ABRAHAM LINCOLN

"The world loves him. He was a man of sorrows."
"Perhaps It Is Not Too Much to Hope That Mr. Roosevelt's Successor, by Virtue of His Intellectual Grasp, Gracious Disposition and Wide Sympathy, May Be Able to Gather Up Some of the Scattered Threads That Were Let Fall by Mr. Lincoln's Death."

Written for the Evening Journal by Dr. C. H. PARKHURST.

One of the chief points of a man's life is the way in which he meets the trials of his life. Abraham Lincoln was a man who met his trials with a courage and a nobility that have never been surpassed. He was a man who was not only a great statesman, but a great man of letters. He was a man who was not only a great statesman, but a great man of letters.
