Sprague W B

Dear Sir,

Being on a visit at this place from Albany, a friend of mine here, Mr J. K. Tappan has expressed a wish to address you on a particular subject, and as he feels some delicacy in doing it, I have volunteered on the strength of the paper acquaintance with which you have honored me to offer him an introduction. I will only say that he is a gentleman of fine literary taste and of a truly deserving and excellent character, and from what I have experienced of your kindness, doubt not that you will cheerfully attend to his request.

I am, Dear Sir, most respectfully,

Your truly Obedient & most devoted,

W B Sprague.
